All Catalinas, organically and individually, can well put a starch bowder to the wheel to make our beautiful California Rive Day campaign a success. Catalina is the only organized business in Southern California of this none too well known California, and it is actively, and in a striking two worthy ends: increasing the consumption—now trivial on a per capita basis—of a vegetable "high in nutrition and high in cost" thus serving the public health and saving its purse, and—simultaneously—furthering the great industry of the state.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE AFTER SANITARY CONDITIONS

Situation in the Mexican quarter and in the reservoir was made a topic at the Chamber of Commerce meeting Monday night.

President Gardner stated that he had the promise of the appropriation of the health department in both places, and that the sanitary conditions in these two places will be strongly in motion to clean up, install flush toilets and sewer houses or outlet the septic tics. An effort is also being made to have camping and the dumping of refuse or any other acts which might contaminate the water supply, or even the shade of the reservoir, forever forbidden to be allowed from the dam side and camping below the dam. If this cannot be accomplished through the city and county health departments it will be taken up with the state department.

The fair committee was interrupted to draw up resolutions of thanks to the people who purchased of the Chamber of Commerce, to the people who will call a special meeting to aid in raising the necessary money.

The report that Johnson grass seed was coming down with the water and infesting the valley will be investigated through the County Horticultural Commission, and steps promised to make an inspection trip and report. Mr. Gardner stated that he would be in the experimenting or destroying department in the readiness with chemicals.

The next meeting will be a musical treat in charge of H. C. Troth, chairman of the horticultural committee, who promises besides a speaker on entomological questions, vocal and instrumental music that will be well rendered. Chairman Gardner stated that the meeting would be of 30 minutes and a musicale, the meeting to be at 8 o'clock sharp.

PROCRASTINATOR

By ELIZABETH R. GREENE.

They were a gay little company that descended the steps of Hill Crest Home to the waiting hay rack, and for the twentieth time that morning Marriana wished she had been ready.

But it was always this way. Somehow she never could get dressed quite as quite as true, and had long ago been sufficiently defined by her friends as "Procrastinator."

Marriana's mother, who was a general favorite, and it was with genuine regret that the little party of pleasure seekers set forth without her that fine morning.

"Couldn't you come later, Marriana?" Mrs. Hardy had inquired, as she stepped into the hay rack.

Marriana shook her head. "I can't," she sighed. "I've got all my packing to do yet."

"Why don't you pack tonight?" generously proffered Bobbie.

Marriana shrugged. "I'll try, Bobby," she smiled, "you're a dear, but I can't promise."

"Oh, come along, Betty," called Pollyanna to her friend, who was standing the eleventh hour, name's she always said.

Bloody Marriana went back to the unfinished packing. Tomorrow they were all going home. "All" meant Marriana's five sisters and her mother, who chaperoned the little party, and Bobbie.

Leaving her unfinished packing she wandered the grounds and presently over a chair. Her vivid imagination pictured the disappointed faces of her friends when she should join them and find the picnic spot deserted, the whole of the vision was checked by the trumpeting of the dinner bell, and she ran.

A radiant vision was Marriana that morning, in her pink muslin and hat, but relatively at the time, white-clad Bobbie, who had been waiting for her, pronounced it.

"Why, you look as rose tinker and this heat increased Marriana's enthusiasm and she ran on.

Here beautiful it was out here Marriana thought, as the pink muslin brushes echoed a tired crooked lyrical song in the distance among the sounds of the haymakers. Rosie Bobbie, who was chaperoning, followed The Man.

Oh, it was shameful that she should think of him so! But since that morning when she had turned her head to her window in the early dawn she could a glimpse of tanned face and dew-wet bronze of tanned and curling hair, the thought of him had not left her. Bobbie had been unable to put the strong, clean-cut face out of her mind, and quite out of mind.

And this was her last day of freedom. Her chance of knowing him, indeed today! Conversation was mostly snoky Brewster and—Aunt Amelia.

Marriana shuddered. Marriana was being a cheery little person, Over grown was vanished as she called the image of the big, dire bovine near by.

"Blackbeard" she mentioned, flirting and beginning to gather the tempting fruit from the nearby grapevine, the stone wall revealed more berries beyond in the pasture.

Laughing softly, Marriana scaled the wall in pretty grace.

"Oh, dear!" sighed Marriana, but quite to herself, as she sat down in the shadows of Brent trees. It seemed to her that in those cool woods, in the shadows of the big, dire berries

DUCK RAISING IS PROFITABLE

Pekins Are Most Popular Breed for Production of Meat and Runners for Eggs.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Although ducks do not appear to be as well adapted as chickens to the nature of income in average farm conditions, yet many farmers are finding duck raising profitable as a side issue to their other farm operations. The demand for tender ducks in the cities seems to be in the increase.

The period of incubation for ducks eggs is 28 days except for the Muscovy duck, which is 33 to 35 days. The eggs may be hatched either naturally by hens or ducks, or artificially by incubators. Hatching either eggs a prime essential to good hatching. The eggs should be gathered and properly cared and kept under the best possible conditions to secure health and vigor. Eggs from overfat breeding stock do not usually produce a fair percentage of strong ducks.

Pekin and Indian Runner ducks rarely sit; consequently, if natural methods of hatching are used the eggs are usually placed under hens, or placed in a brooder, or placed in crates, or stacks and covered to induce hatching.

Before setting a hen, duck her thoroughly with a good powder. By so doing the powder feed the hen to, or for, what is to follow, and keep and work it thoroughly into the hen's skin, giving her a good dusting the week and under the wings. Set her on clean, well-made nests, on clean, crushed grains, such as corn or wheat. Place her in a convenient place, depending on her size and the number of the eggs, using the smaller alphabet of eggs in cool weather and the larger number in warm weather. Cutting the hens at hatching time will do not disturb them until their tenants' fortune, when it may be best to remove the ducklings that hatched out.

Hens must be well cared for by hatching ducks' eggs, as the period of incubation is a week longer than that of hens' eggs. It usually takes ducklings from 24 to 48 hours to hatch after they pick the shells; therefore hens are allowed to stay on the nest to get off the nest for food and water when they are disposed to leave the shell and then confine her to the nest until the ducklings are hatched. Duck eggs need more moisture than hens eggs at hatching time, so it takes the ducks much longer to get out of the shell. SELECT EGGS FOR SETTING

Avoid Those That Are Abnormally Small and Poorly Shaped—Size Is Important.

(By J. E. Rice.)

Eggs that are abnormally small and poorly shaped should not be used for incubation purposes. Eggs that have thin or very porous shells not hatch well. This is a matter of the management of Agriculture. If possible, eggs should not be used for food, and is never advisable to use for hatching eggs that are cracked or broken. Use of the goitrous ways to shells uniformity is the off spring. To select uniformly good-sized eggs of fine same color.

WHICH?

By DOROTHY I. DUFF.

We were gathered on the hotel piazza, little former classmates who had not met for a year. It was a glorious evening, and of course each had a story to tell. Kitty in a leather dressing-gown, Mrs. Bloomer and Mrs. Whitney, sisters-in-law, Alice, the rose beauty, and Jessie, the pale artistic beauty.

"My story?" asked Nell, in answer to Kitty's question, "Well, yes, I have a story to tell, but it is about someone else."

"Let's hear it," we all cried, and so she began:

"When Billy Appleton struck New York he was then a mere clerk, earning his clothes, $200 and a picture of Miss Hall, in a cover frame.

"Billy was a designer of shirts. He loved the work, made to the desire patternest of his father, who thought the boy would quickly tire of it if left to himself, and would return home ready to enter business.

"Back in Portland, Conn., where Billy's father was Appleton & Co., the leading dry goods store, and Mr. Appleton was Portland's most prominent citizen. Proud of the fact, Mr. Appleton had decided at only that he had only son should fulfill in his footsteps. Billy, however, had other plans. He wanted to be something more than a mere tool in a small pauble—he wanted to be famous. And so, with only $200 in his pocket and the picture of Miss Hall in his heart, he struck out for New York.

"He could not have left a better place, but a fellow had to have his chance. Portland was a little town, and everyone knew Billy's father and confidence of Billy's ability. Billy that he would much make his fortune and when she could come to New York and they would live happily ever afterward.

"But Billy soon discovered that life in New York was very different from life in Portland. In Portland he lived in a big white house with a lawn in front; he had two horses and a little runabout; he had an office and clerks whose whole time seemed to be taken up in these duties; but in New York he lived in one small hall bedroom, without a chestnut tree to shield Elsie's pretty face. The elevated trains rumbled by and shook and made him wish with all his might for Portland. And the landlady seemed to be ever present with her hand out to take some of Billy's precious cents.

"In Portland he had been the one and only designer; but here in New York! Why there in New York everybody seemed to be a designer.

"At last, however, Billy found a job; not a very good one, but at least a job which would feed him and pay his room rent with a little to spare. He was set to work designing ties and figures which were to be used on the beautiful neckwear made by the firm for churches and public buildings.

"About this time he began to comprise to their employers for the best work from a number of the best ideas, and he worked all his spare time on the ties, thinking of Elsie and about it; all his work was for her. Every gift he made, every thought for her, much to the stranger's disappointment.

"And then he made a tie that was very unexpected, and Billy's heart thrilled as it had never thrilled before. Adele's eyes were as black as midnight, and she had straight black hair, quite a contrast to little golden-haired Elsie with the blue eyes. Adele was a cheerful girl. She liked to dance and sing. Had to dance, and it was hard for his spare change to pay for the dinner and the theater and the flowers which Adele demanded. Billy himself was in the second hand clothing, and time flow for him much faster than ever before.

"At last came a day when Billy gave awarded the prize for the best design. He was wild with joy, for with the prize was a considerable increase in salary. Now Elsie could come to the city and Billy would show how they could be married and be forever happy.

"But did he want to marry Elsie? Think of Adele? But Adele, Elsie, or, you, nobody could doubt that; but didn't he love Adele? Elsie seemed like a dream, while Adele was an everpresent reality.

"And then Billy Appleton had the hardest day of his life. He was at his wits end. He sat down and looked at their pictures. Then he found Elsie he was sure that he loved her and that she was true, but he loved Adele so was not so sure. Would any little Elsie be waiting for him when he retire? Would Adele be happy in quiet Portland?

"About midnight Billy wrote a letter to proposal. Should he send it to Elsie? Or to Adele? Then slowly, slowly he put in an envelope addressed to Elsie and slowly addressed it. He put on his hat and coat and went out. After a moment's thought he dropped in the letter into the mail. And there Nell paused.

"Tell us what she did before it, Nell, you didn't tell us!" broke in Alice.

"Well," said Nell, "I don't know exactly what she did, "that's just what I don't know myself. I know that she engaged Adele for a month, and I do Billy money near little Elsie and Adele, and a little more, and I know the silence of the red lights with Adele for the rest of his life.

MARY GRAHAM BONNER
SIR HEARTY CORDIALITY.

The huge creature, known as Sir Hearty Cordiality, was standing straight up now which he hadn't been doing for a long time, and as the boy and girl adventurers knew that the night watchman had taken off a part of the roof.

And upon looking up above the head of the huge creature they saw that there were some stars twinkling and smiling down at them.

"Everything must be made clear to the boy and the girl who are on the way to the House of Secrets," said the huge creature. "The boy and the girl were visiting him at the Fairy City Hotel. "Am I right, Master Thoughtfulness?"

"Very right," he said.

"But do sit down," said the huge creature, "and as your necks want a break or feel as though they were breaking off, I'll ask for the round chairs and the raised banquet table."

Another gong sounded and the boy and the girl found themselves in two chairs that were put by them, from the place where they had been sitting, and they didn't have to scratch their heads, but they had a huge creature. All the other brownies and their chairs which had just appeared, and the enormous banquet table in the corner of it, everything was raised and the floor, too, so that their feet didn't dangle, they

The huge creature spoke to the night watchman again, and some more of the roof seemed to be removed and there was plenty of light and a lot of able gardeners. They had the sky above them, and they saw that they were sitting in one of the upper floors of the Fairy Hotel. They had the things behind them which they had seen in the beginning of their expeditions and the banquet table.

"How about your friend?" asked the boy, who had suddenly thought of the boy and the girl looked up from the table and they saw that there was a opening through the roof for him, and that his long legs had a

"If have so much to explain," said the huge creature, "in the first place, boy and girl, do eat your soup. You are as pale as two ghosts."

They began to eat their soup, which came from a little bit of a bowl, a very small cup to a good deal. Then they ate a good deal.

"Delicious soup," said the girl, "is it chicken?"

"That's pooh," said the huge creature, "it is a soup made with my stomach, the great banquet table which grows from trees, and the big spoon. The food is just a way trays and food all banquet have of doing at the Big Hospitality Hotel. Where creatures who have stomachs, they have to eat to maintain their friends, it is surprising how delicious the food and the food they grow.

"We are given special power of making things grow because we've been here so long a time. But you'll notice, boy and girl, that the friends you have to be very hospitable and to make what they have with you, always seem to be larger, and their homes seem bigger, and their food seems more than when the hospitable people. Of course when a friend of yours shares a banana, we'll say with you, that doesn't mean that the banana grows bigger, but doesn't mean that the banana seem to grow just because your friend, wants to share it with the you?

"It's all the spirit of hospitality, and that's what we care about here. Now, I'm Sir Hearty Cordiality, and when guests come, I grow and I expand. I grow bigger than I am a big creature as I am now. I grow and I expand when I'm feeling, but this is as it should be.

"I'm not a little wonder what because of all the small brownies who held the traps who grew, too? They run off when you weren't looking for you were trying to see as many things you missed some. They went to see that brownie was going all night in the kitchen, for this was their night for going to the work there. Everyone takes turns in the Hospitality Hotel and everyone is happy. They know that no one works too hard or has too much food, and, I don't know wouldn't do in the Hospitality Hotel?"

JOLLY SONG SPARROWS.

"We're the Jolly Song Sparrows," said little Sam Sparrow to little Sidney Song Sparrow.

"And we always will be," said Sidney. "We're so very lonesome. We can't go in much for hospitality down. Our feathers are rather lowcutish gray and not very pretty."

"In fact, they're very plain. They're very plain indeed. They are dull and uninteresting. But you see we can't have everything, and we have voices."

"I much rather have a lovely voice than a lovely coat of feathers," said Sam.

"Then you're satisfied?" said Sidney, "for you have the lovely voice and you haven't the lovely feathers."

"Quite satisfied," said Sam.

"We're not very big, and we're so small that we are coming like the little Humming Bird," add little Sidney Song Sparrow.

"We're just about the size of the ordinary, usual sparrow."

"Oh, well," said Sam, "people do not mind, I am quite sure, whether we small or not. They don't mind if we're not coming little creatures like the Humming birds and they don't care if we're not big, beautiful birds like the peacocks."

"They don't mind if our feathers are plain, for they like our voices, and they have lovely voices, called as the Jolly Song Sparrows."

"Ah, you will, Sidney, "and I've been hearing more than that."

"Do tell me!" said Sam.

"I will," said Sidney. "When would you like me to tell you, Sam?"

"Now, if you don't mind," said Sam, "the sooner is better."

"Very well," said Sidney, "I will tell you at once!" said Sidney.

"I've heard people not only say that we were such jolly little singers, but they've said our voices were lovely. They've said they were very much like a canary's voice.

"Yes, they said our voices were lovely.

"And they said that they liked to hear our songs again and again. Do you know this is why we have always sung at all times of the day, too?

"Yes, I know," said Sam. "We've been always told that people liked it because we sang early in the morning, late in the afternoon, at all times during the day, and even had been heard at night.

"That is why we always kept to our rule of being obliging about our singing so all people who haven't wanted to say: 'I'm sorry, but I don't feel just like singing today. Anyother time.' No, we've always been willing because we've heard that our voices give so much pleasure.

"And they still do from all I've heard," continued little Sidney Sparrow.

"They said that we were so neighborly, too. They've thought a great deal of our neighborly ways. They said that it was so nice to have so small an house.

"They've said that it was really wonderful that we have had musicians about all the time, cheering them up at all times.

"They have liked the way we've been so obliging as to sing in the Sparrow or alone.

"They have liked our ways.

"Yes," said Sam, "and we still always see that people never are saying thing about us but something that is pleasant.

"But now I must be off to the nest, which is right on the ground."

"Our nest is up on a branch," said Sidney, "so we can see more of what there is to see, and more noise about.

"Well, I'm off. Good-by, Sam."

"Good-by, Sidney," said Sam; "I'm so sorry that I'm off from hearing the song of farewell, and some people hearing him, will say, 'Oh, what a little little friendly soul is the sparrow!'"

Co-operation That Develops

Every property owner really owes it to his community to be a subscriber to the home paper, and every merchant and business man owes it a liberal patronage. The local newspaper is about the most essential of the agencies which are essential to the progressive community spirit. One's attitude toward the local paper is a criterion of one's relation to the community itself.

Read "Gazette Liners."

Compared with other things, The Gazette at $1.50 the year is saving the only real bargain left. A dollar and a half used to buy 75 pounds of meat or print paper; it now buys 15. It used to buy 20 pounds of new ink; it now buys 4. It used to purchase 5000 ems of composition; it now gets but 1000. So it is plainly seen that the editor is not profiteering.

CITRUS INSTITUTE ANTI FUMIGATION

Citrus growers will be pleased to learn that for their convenience it has been decided to combine the Southern counties Citrus Institute Tuesday, June 29th, with the Los Angeles County and Pan Central Institute, to be held the Los Angeles County Farm Bureau, thus no activities to be held up anyone on Friday and Saturday, June 30th and 31st, to be held in the high school pavilion, W. Philadelphia Streets, Pasadena.

NEW CLOVER SEED

Farm Advisor Hodgson announces that he has received 100 pounds of the new annual White Sweet Clover seed developed by the Iowa State Agricultural Station and recently by the Bureau of Plant Industry. He is distributing to growers who will agree to test this seed. Last fall he secured a pound of this seed which was distributed to some twelve or fifteen growers who are being given a test. To date the results are extremely promising, particularly as a spring cover crop for citrus orchards.

Poultry Demonstrations

The Agricultural Extension Service of Los Angeles County is busy making arrangements for a series of poultry culling demonstrations to be held in various parts of the county. The Extension Poultry Specialist from the University of California, will be here at this time to conduct these demonstrations.

CANNERY TO OPEN

C. M. Gammon, president of the Van Nuys Canning Company, states that they will open their canning plant Beans this month if sufficient quantity is available. The canning pack will commence the first of July, followed by peaches, tomatoes, pumpkins and spinach. The company expects a busy season and will be ready for operation of the growers in the valley. Van Nuys News.

WORTH SELLING

Don't wait until you have to advertise your business to sell, to learn of the benefits derived from advertising. Advertising is the Lubber Barbado of modern business. It makes money grow where only poor weeds before. It plants the seed of prosperity in the garden of business. Advertising is the gardener's best implement for the weeding and enriching.

If you have any worth selling, it is worth telling about. Don't be satisfied with the idea that the time just happens in, teach people to come out of their ruts to investigate what is what, learn the reasons and then tell them what you have to offer them. Let the people the gardener and let not only the people around here, but everywhere know that you seek and desire their patronage.

Hunting New Pearl Beds.

The pearl fisheries of the Orient and of the South sea are hunting for new beds of the precious gems. The demand for pearls is so great and the fisheries are being worked so continuously that new pearls do not have time to grow.

What "Cenotaph" Means.

Several readers have written asking the meaning of "cenotaph." The word is derived from the Greek words "kenos," meaning "empty" and "ta phos," meaning "tomb." In other words, a cenotaph is a sepulchral monument erected in honor of a person whose mortal lies elsewhere. — London Tit-Bits.

Superstitions of Siam.

In Siam all babies receive the same name at birth. This name is Dang, which means red, and it is the only designation for some months. At birth a cord blessed by the priests is tied round the ankle of the house and blue balls of rice are thrown in "lucky directions."

JUST FUN

Redeeming Trait.

"I know I'm old, but I'm crazy about you," cooed Mr. Moneybags. "When I go I'll come all my fortune to you if you'll have me."

"Have you any bad habits?" asked Miss Goldsbury, thoughtfully.

"Only a few," he said, hopefully, "yet could call them a great many bad habits into one thing, of course I'd marry you, and we'd have our honeymoon on the top floor of some tall hotel, won't we?"—American Legion Weekly.

Surgeon's Job.

Collectors of curiosities, being constantly on the watch for smugglers, have certain demands which they expect almost unconscious. Not long ago a tourist came aboard with a pretty swollen cheek.

"What have you there?" asked the customs officer, pointing to the swelling.

"An abscess, sir," was the reply.

"What? such an enormous abscess?" "Expectation properly managed is an asset. My success in politics is due to the fact that while I was often compelled to disappoint people I always managed to keep 'em hopeful."

Significant Epithets.

"I suppose you are prepared to deliver some great speeches."

"I hope not, sir," replied Senator Sagging. "One word may decide the future of a man in my position. My epithets depend on whether you know you have to say 'Aye' and when to say 'No.'"

THEY.

Her: Don't you think we could marry on my salary?

Him: Yes, but could we stay married?

The Law of Compensation.

"Why do people say that pig-iron is a diamond in the rough?"

"A crafter doesn't do much work—but how he wears it!"

Economy.

"Can favor strict economy, I suppose?"

"Yes!" replied Senator Sorghum. "This is a country where economy is a good deal the same as my attitude toward a bear. I wish my brother Ichabod is in the bear-hunting spot let me do the explaining."

Support.

"Why do men marry these rich theirs? Is it to prevent people from thinking they are poor?"

"No. They are for people to catch hold of—they are afraid of our prices."—Copenhagen Harness.

Can't Get Away From It.

"Why do you call your car a wonder-mine?"

"Do I need a hook to tell me that?" "Hush!"

"Trouble is forced on me. I can't get away from it."

Probably That's It.

"Your son seems to be pretty."

"My husband doesn't think so."

"He seems to have enough to say he doesn't think so."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Far From the Madding Crowd.

"Where are those who have done my carriage?" asked Mr. Crosby Hanson.

The Story of Our States

By JONATHAN BRACE

VII.

NORTH CAROLINA

THE CAPE of North Carolina is very appropriately named Bathelight, for it lies a little farther to the east than any other state. Ralleigh was the first to attempt a settlement, it was in 1584 that Ralleigh sent two expeditions from Queen Elizabeth to plant an English colony in America, and the expeditions which he sent established a little colony on Roanoke Island. There in 1587 was born the first American child of English parents. She was named Virginia Dare, after the virgin queen. This colony, due to Spanish influence in Spain, could not be properly supported, and after a few years perished. It was not until over a century later that permanent settlements were made. During pioneers from Virginia pressed south into the new territory, and these, augmented by a large company of Huguenots from France and a greater number of Germans from the Palatinate, founded the first North Carolina town of Newborn in 1710. By the time of the Revolution the population in North Carolina had increased to such an extent, with an influx of Scotch-Irish and Scotch Highlanders who settled chiefly in the western counties, that it became second among the original thirteen colonies. Today its population ranks fifteen it to twelve electoral votes for president, in area it stands about half way among the states with 52,426 square miles. North Carolina was the twelfth state to ratify the Constitution, the date of ratification taking place on November 21, 1789. Under direction of the state Carolina, as in the case of South Carolina, sprang from the Latin Carolus, meaning Charles, and was given originally in honor of King Charles IX. of France and retained by King Charles II of England. North Carolina is also known as the old North state.

Perfect upon your present blending, the apple sauce has tasty, not on your part misfortunes, of which all men have experienced.
WHOLESOME DESSERTS.
A dessert which may be given children with freedom is baked apples in various ways, the following being found a little different from the usual ways of preparing them:
Individual Baked Apples.—Use the small apples in quarters and place the quarters in a pan, the apples in cups to resemble a whole apple. Fill the cavities with raisins, dates or nutlets. Add to each cup one teaspoonful of water. Bake until tender. The skin is not removed from the apples. Serve hot or cold with cream and sugar.
Ginger Cream.—Soak three-fourths of a teaspoonful of gelatin in one tablespoonful of cold water. Make a custard of one egg, one tablespoonful of sugar, six tablespoonfuls of milk, a pinch of salt, beating all with an egg beater. Cook over water until the queen is created, then add one tablespoonful of minced Canton ginger and two tablespoonfuls of syrup; add the gelatin to the hot custard and when thick stir in one-half cupful of whipped cream. Pour into molds and chill.
Lemon Crumb Pie.—Grate the rind and take the juice of a lemon. Mix two tablespoonfuls of butter with five tablespoonfuls of sugar, add the grated rind, the juice, three-quarters of a cupful of milk, and cook; add the yolks of three eggs, well beaten, and the lemon juice and rind. Line a pie plate with a rich layer of buttered crumbs and pour in the mixture. Cover when baked and frost with a meringue made from the whites. Brown in the oven and serve cold.
Nut Mince Pie.—Mix together in the order given the following ingredients: One-half cupful of chopped apples, one-half cupful of seeded raisins, one cupful of chopped apples, one-half cupful of dark raisins, one-fourth of a cupful of cider vinegar, one-fourth of a cupful each of fruit juice of any kind of canned fruit, cinnamon, one-half teaspoonful each of allspice and cloves and one teaspoonful each of cinnamon and salt. Add enough crushed crackers to take off the right consistency and fill a lined plate with the mixture. This makes a large pie.

Elegance.
Elegance is something more than expensive clothes or even a wardrobe and restraint. It implies a forced position to save the labor of moving objects on which work is to be done.
Simple Explanation.
Tell a man he is an ass or even a simpleton is arithmetic, but it came out to a new low when I told a young married couple one live through September without having a fatal quarrel over whose duty is to get up and get the extra rover, the chance is pretty fair to live until the next green together in the same anchor.—Wilmington News-Journal.

Lake's Peculiar Migration.
Near Valdosta, in Georgia, there is a lake three miles long and three miles wide, with an average depth of twelve feet of water, which disappears every three or four years and then comes back again. It disappears into natural subterranean channels, taking two or three years to the process and leaving a beautiful sandy basin, dotted as much as he water begins to come back, and in a couple of weeks it is the same old lake.
At Cos.
There is nothing in life that gives me such a sense of distance, of little importance, as the setting of the sun or moon at sea. It defines the insignificance of a person who is separate you from those you love with a completeness that is unequaled at other times. It is the only mark upon the face of the ocean and courts you into a reckoning which there is nowhere else to make, and which is the more and the more and the more.
Old "New Amsterdam."
In 1664, on the 9th of September, Peter Stuyvesant, the last Dutch governor of New Amsterdam, signed the articles of surrender which transformed into the hands of Colonel Nicholls, the Englishman who had sailed up the river and easily the island had capitulated, but Stuyvesant was determined to shed blood. The British immediately dropped the name of the city of New York in honor of the duke of York, later James II, and gave them at the head of the British army.
Origin of Dollar Mark.
Some claim that it is a modification of the English symbol (£) for the pound, another explanation is that it came from the letters U. S., written one over the other. Yet another theory is that the two upright posts represent the pillars of Hercules and the ribbon of Hercules, which early appeared on our coins and became transformed with a scroll.
Chinese Are Honest.
Honesty is a characteristic among most Chinamen. Some of these people have accumulated considerable fortunes by honest means and have gone back to their native land to end their days after the world, or have brought their families to America.

Old Stuff.
Elegance.
Elegance is something more than expensive clothes or even a wardrobe and restraint. It implies a forced position to save the labor of moving objects on which work is to be done.
Appetite of Birds.
Birds are insectivorous by nature. Some birds consume two and a half times their weight in food every four hours. The heron, which has the reputation of being a glutton in spite of its size, is a striking example. Wild pigeons are extremely greedy eaters.
Protests Eyes.
To protect the eyes from an electric light without interfering with the illumination in other directions, a novel shade, to be attached to a lamp with a wire spring, has been patented.
Making It Easy.
To facilitate the release for taking the finger-prints of infants in Amsterdam, a method is used in the hospitals in Jena.—The Passing Show (London).
