TEACH LOGIC TO FOREIGNERS

FORD ENGLISH SCHOOLS INCLUDE PRINCIPLES OF PURE AMERICANISM IN STUDENTS.

TRIAL DRAWING TO A CLOSE

Attorneys Begin Final Arguments
After Ford Case Presents Dramatic Testimony On Educational Work.

Mr. Clement, Mich.—Henry Ford's counsel kept until the final day on the trial of the Ford case. The strongest arguments in their possession. Not until the trial was within a few hours of its close did they bring to the witness stand Clinton C. Dray, superintendent of the Ford English school.

"Mr. Ford," said the witness, "was the opinion that you could not successfully put over one line with there were 12 languages spoken in the factory, so to promote that one idea, which said is Americanism, he insisted that every workman must learn to speak the 'American'—and the English—language."

"There were 1200 students in the school before the United States entered the war and the factory was practically turned over to government work. Sample lessons were read by the witness. Parts are given as follows: "Every good American loves and respects the United States flag."

"Our flag stands for liberty, justice and peace."

"In colors are red, white and blue. The red stands for love, the white stands for purity, the blue stands for truth."

"American flags," said the witness, "were used in the dining room and a silk flag always flutters before an electric fan."

Teach Americanism.
The men are taught that there is no greater title than "American citizen" and are urged to accept of every sign of acknowledgment by this country to the world and to themselves, through knowledge, to defend their liberties.

Pictures of great American actors, the class rooms, special exercises are held on the birthday of great leaders of the nation and, finally, when the great day of the 4th of July comes, the sovereign American flag and is given membership to what is known as the "American Club." The Federal aid state orders recognize a diploma from the Ford English school as an evidence of adequate preparation for citizenship. It was shown.

Through this testimony counsel sought to prove that the men who taught 1000 foreigners to love their adopted country and to respect its flag could scarcely be called an anarchist and that a man who sought every other method to build love for the Stars and Stripes in the hearts of those who come to it from foreign shores, could never have made the slanderous statements attributed to him by Tribune correspondent.

Mr. Ford, it was shown, treated all his occasional workers to the government at the time war broke out, the Ford department found the men who used in the Ford English school to be in all training camp. Henry Ford paid the salaries of the men he knew in all government for the work.

Closing Arguments Open.
Closing arguments to be done upon the last of the week. Wm. Lanning led off for Ford counsel. He called attention first to the testimony which showed that the Tribune, in its interview, in March, 1918, and since it thought such action would be conceived or at least to give riches for the United States, had found Henry Ford blocking the path just when his long campaign gave promise of bearing fruit. Thereupon, said the attorney, The Tribune set out to destroy Mr. Ford's influence, to reveal his own part and to strip his vital veins which pleaded for a course which would bring the blessing upon his to the south to regain her feet to strike first in a new "biggest act" of independence and freedom.

Attorney Vermont Kirkland spoke for The Tribune. He declared that what Mr. Ford had done since 1918—when he had been called an anarchist—had nothing whatever to do with patriotism. It was what the newspaper attributed the mass factor as an enemy of his country, the only thing that Mr. Ford had done an innocent and valuable work for the government. Finally, he said and he claimed that this did not alter the facts that they were before the court.

Mr. Ford, the attorney insisted, was an anarchist at the time The Tribune had his act, and such, the truth be said was sufficient justification for the attack.

Water and the Human Body.
The specific gravity of water and the fact that it is virtually the same. A body in the water is supported by equal pressure on all points, so it never floats to be at least that much more than it is. It is therefore, more likely that it will float on the sea. So original are ideas given their course in the water.
