Low, narrow and with a short turning radius, suitable for the most closely planted orchards and vineyards, and still with sufficient power to pull three bottom or even open field work. Tractor equally good in light sand or adobe, wet or dry. All working parts completely enclosed and running in oil.

Which shall it be, 15c or 23c fuel?

Most oil companies have discontinued the manufacture of distillate.
 They are now using a cracking process which knows no distillate, but separates the light oils into just two grades, gasoline and kerosene.
 As long as crude oil is refined we will have kerosene. Tractor engines are divided into two classes, gasoline engines and kerosene engines. Either engine will burn distillate. Gasoline engines will not successfully burn distillate.

ALLWORK II burns kerosene SUCCESSFULLY
