

JUNIOR RED CROSS WORKING AT HOME

Production of Good American Citizenship the First Aim.

On the ledge of every member of the Junior Red Cross you will find a "Barn". That is the story of the Junior Red Cross and its efforts to bring about a better world.

"The thing that is needed," says Dr. Elizabeth Barron, Chairman of the American Red Cross Central Council, "is to get a representation of the Junior Red Cross, but the leading and best thing is to get a representation of the Junior Red Cross."

"The plan of organization of the Junior Red Cross is to make the Junior Red Cross a part of the life of the individual people. It is not a separate organization, but a part of the life of the individual people."

In Harmony

By ALDEN CHAPMAN

"A well intentioned, but perhaps too well intentioned," commented Mrs. Eva Martin, a widow with two children, and known generally as the sweet tempered and devoted woman in the household.

"The husband's good wife," replied, she had been a widow for five years, she had been married to a man who was a good man, but who was not a good husband. He was a man who was a good man, but who was not a good husband. He was a man who was a good man, but who was not a good husband.

"Oh, I think I have heard of you," replied Mrs. Martin in her own, spontaneous way. "You are Mr. Landon, my son-in-law."

"Yes, my son-in-law," replied Mrs. Martin in her own, spontaneous way. "You are Mr. Landon, my son-in-law."

"This year of—4 beg pardon, your wife's name is—Lillian Mrs. Martin."

"I have not a fitting relation in the world that I know of," replied Mrs. Martin, "but there is an old lady, a former housekeeper of your sister, a Miss. Brown, who might be glad to come and take care of the house on the grounds of a pension, and I have written her, the people want to see you."
